Event details:

Muranów is a place where before 1939 there was a bustling northern district and the heart of the Jewish capital. Razed to the ground during the war, it was reborn in a completely different form after 1945. Today, the buildings of Muranów cannot tell its history. They no longer exist. Instead, there is street art, colourful walls of blocks, hidden passages leading into housing estates. On the occasion of the Night of Museums, let's immerse ourselves in the street art of Muranów and let it tell the story of this place, as well as discover what important issues artists address here.
